James River disputes warning on eating fish from below mill

The James River Corporation has challenged the basis used by the State of New Hampshire for issuing an advisory against eating fish from the Androscoggin River below the company's paper mill in Berlin. "Clearly," a company report states, "no fish consumption advisory would be warranted due to the Berlin/Gorham [mill] discharges."

The New Hampshire advisory, issued by the Bureau of Health Risk Assessment (see last week's Citizen), warns people in the area to limit their consumption of fish caught in the river below the paper mill to not more than one or two fish per year. Pregnant women and nursing mothers were warned not to eat any fish caught in the river—from below the mill to the state border.

The fish are contaminated with dioxin, a byproduct of the kraft papermaking process. Fish store dioxin—which is present in minute quantities in the mill's discharges—and dioxin has been demonstrated to cause cancer in laboratory animals. Fish caught in the river above the mill were found to have no dioxin in their flesh and were deemed perfectly safe to eat, according to New Hampshire officials.

The James River Corp. report, issued in response to an EPA proposal to limit the discharge of dioxin by kraft paper mills, argues that "the New Hampshire fish consumption advisory is technically flawed and unnecessary." The report charges New Hampshire authorities with using new EPA standards for safe levels of dioxin instead of the much more lenient standards set years ago by the Food and Drug Administration.

The State of Maine, when it issued its advisory (four years ago) warning people to eat no more than one fish a month from the river, used the FDA standards for safe levels of dioxin.

Maine, based partly on its existing advisory on the dangers of eating fish from the Androscoggin, has supported the EPA's proposed crackdown on the James River mill, whose discharge license expires in September.

The James River report takes the State of Maine to task for its position, pointing out that the fish tested in Maine were from a portion of the river below the Boise (Rumford) and IP (Jay) mills. "The dioxin levels found in the fish that are the basis of the fish consumption advisory [issued by the State of Maine] cannot be shown to be attributable to the Berlin/Gorham mills."

A Maine public health official told The Citizen the dioxin levels found in the fish caught below Jay were three times as high as the levels found in the fish below the Berlin mill. He pointed out that the consumption limits in the Maine advisory are not as stringent as the New Hampshire limits because Maine relied on the only guidelines available at the time, which were the FDA guidelines.

A New Hampshire public health official told The Citizen the difference between the consumption limits set by each state were partially the result of the

Rainey hearing June 5

The Superior Court, at South Paris, will hear a motion to suppress evidence in the Gary Rainey murder case.

Mr. Rainey, of Greenwood, is charged with the murder of his stepdaughter and her boyfriend, in Bethel, and the attempted murder of his stepson, in Locke Mills. The motion to suppress is in regards to certain incriminating statements Mr. Rainey made to police in the parking lot at the Oxford County Sheriff's Office last Oct. 22, when he turned himself in shortly after the murders.

Court-appointed attorney Bob Russell will present the motion at the June 5 hearing, scheduled for 1 p.m. An actual trial date has not yet been set.

Selectmen start search for new chief of police

Following a closed-door session, the Bethel Board of Selectmen decided to use local resources in the search for a new police chief. The most recent chief, Eric Wight, submitted his resignation two weeks ago; it became effective Monday. (See last week's Citizen for details.)

Prior to going behind closed doors, the selectmen heard from two local citizens with police experience. Lt. Bill Williams, of the Oxford County Sheriff's Department, urged the selectmen to move as quickly as possible on getting the police force up to its authorized strength of one chief and one full-time officer. Presently, the town is being covered by one reserve officer, plus some coverage from the sheriff's deputies and state police. "It's summertime," Lt. Williams warned, "and everyone is short—the state, the county and the town."

Rickie Osgood, who resigned from the local force last month, told the board the town needed police policies as well as police officers. "There's no policies," he said. "That's the reason I got done." He said that without policies the Town and the individual officers could be open to lawsuits.

The board apparently took the advice of the two men to heart.

After returning to open session, the three selectmen present voted to begin the search for a new police chief immediately and to appoint three citizens at large to join with the selectmen and the town manager in reviewing the resumes of candidates and conducting the interviews. (Selectmen Arlan Jodrey and Victor Coolidge were absent.)

It was decided to advertise the position in the state's major daily papers plus the weekly papers in Oxford County.

The town manager urged anyone interested in helping with the search for a new chief to contact the town office.

Last time town officials undertook to find a new chief, in 1987, the search was conducted through the Maine Municipal Association and cost taxpayers $2,500. That search took about eight months.

Town Manager Rodney Lynch also informed the board that he will hire Reserve Officer Dale Bellman as a full-time officer. Officer Bellman was one of

Is Perham's diamond too rough for home team?

Last week's rain may have washed out the home season for West Paris' favorite baseball team.

Mark Thurlow, player-manager of the Keiser Homes Westies, said he was afraid the surface at Perham Field would be unplayable following its flooding last Friday by the Little Androscoggin River.

If the Pine Tree League team is unable to play its home games at Perham Field, the players would be forced to either play all their games on the road or to find another home-field site, Mr. Thurlow said. He added that he planned to contact SAD #44 officials to discuss the possibility of using the Telstar diamond as the team's home field.

The playing surface at Perham Field, which has been flooded in the past, was not great even before last week's inundation. But the friendly fans and relaxed, down-home atmosphere at the park made it unique—and an real asset for Keiser Homes in their home schedule. "It's the most exciting baseball field in the area," Mr. Thurlow said.

Last year the team racked up the best regular season record in the Pine Tree League, but lost the championship series to Lewiston, three games to one.

This year's season begins on May 30, and Lewiston is once again the team to beat, Mr. Thurlow said. And Keiser Homes will be trying, even if that means playing all their games on the road.

"We will play," he promised, "come hell or high water."

Flooding causes less damage than in 1987, but may cost towns more

It wasn't much of a weekend for a drive.

"Trails that had never washed out before were just gone," said local jeeper Goeff Gaudreau, who led a 45-vehicle Jeep Jamboree over local dirt roads and old county roads.

But the jeepers were creepers—though you certainly can't call them "sticks-in-the-mud"—as they constantly found themselves blocked by impassable flooding and washouts. Meanwhile, out on the larger, more maintained roads, motorists were also encountering obstacles created by last week's interminable, occasionally heavy rains.

Schools in SAD #17 and SAD #44 never opened Friday as rivers and streams rose, and by Friday afternoon many low-lying highways and biways were underwater, with traffic either blocked or reduced to one lane. And when the waters receded, they left some roads badly eroded, others totally washed out.

Bethel suffered $10,500-worth of flood damage to its roads. Other towns in the area reported lost culverts, undermining, and washouts. "It's a lot of minor damage that's going to end up costing a lot of money," said Greenwood Selectman Ray Seames.

At one point during the deluge, the area received nearly five inches of rain in one 36-hour period. At the U. S. Geological Survey guaging station, in Berlin, N.H.,

THE NORMALLY TRANQUIL LITTLE ELLIS RIVER, at Andover, became a raging torrent from the weeklong rains. While most people agreed the area needed the rain, most also agreed that it was too much of a good thing.

Local highways to benefit from MDOT's new 2-year plan

A number of local roads and bridges will be improved as part of the Maine Department of Transportation's proposed two-year work plan, submitted to the Legislature last week. Total cost of all the submitted projects—including rail, air, and marine—is $338 million; $175 million of this would be federal money.

Local projects include the following:

- Light resurfacing of the interchange of Rte. 2 and Rte. 5 in Bethel; estimated cost, $180,000.
- Reconstruction of Lovers' Lane, in Bethel, beginning ¼-mile northwesterly of Rte. 5 and extending northwesterly for ½-mile; estimated cost $355,000.
- Replacement of the deficient bridge deck on the Androscoggin River bridge, in Gilead, located ½-mile north of Rte. 2; estimated cost, $210,000.
- Replacement of the deficient First Bridge over Pond Stream, in Hanover, located 1 mile north of Rte. 2; estimated cost $170,000.

IGA expansion gets approval; Sunday sales out

Carl Glidden, owner of the Bethel IGA, received the go-ahead from the Bethel Planning Board last Wednesday night for the planned expansion of his Main Street supermarket. The expansion will increase the overall size of the local IGA to 13,300 square feet, with 7,940 square feet of retail space—an increase of about 3,000 square feet of retail space.

The vote to approve Mr. Glidden's Site Plan Review Permit was 7-0. The only disgruntled note came from board member Donna Remington who pointed out that the enlarged supermarket will not be allowed to stay open on Sundays. [According to the state's Blue Laws, only stores with less than 5,000 square feet of retail space can stay open on Sundays.]

Mr. Glidden advised the board that state law does give Town Meeting the authority to allow a particular store to stay open on Sundays if the closure of the store is a hardship on the townspeople.

He noted that with the recent closing of the Edelweiss Country Store, doing any grocery shopping on Sunday could be a problem. He added, however, that

W'stock attempt to take land by eminent domain stalled by court action

An attempt by Woodstock officials to resolve a long-standing property dispute by invoking the town's right of eminent domain has been stymied, at least temporarily, by the court.

The Board of Selectmen had scheduled a special town meeting for tomorrow (Thursday) evening, at which residents would have been asked to approve the town's attempt to take over a piece of Lake Christopher shoreland at the end of Lake Street.

The property in question is quite small—an open-V-shaped piece of beachfront measuring approximately 20 feet on each side. It has long been a point of contention between the town and Harold and Violet Clukey, whose property—which is currently for sale—abuts the Lake Christopher end of Lake Street.

The Clukeys responded to the eminent domain threat by seeking a restraining order preventing the town from holding the meeting. Town officials subsequently agreed to postpone the meeting until Superior Court Justice Carl O. Bradford could rule on the restraining order, Town Manager Vern Maxfield said. Justice Bradford is scheduled to take the matter up Monday.

According to the town manager, there is no firm documentation for ownership of the piece of land, which is just north of the town dock.

Townspeople had traditionally used the spot for swimming, Mr. Maxfield said, until approximately 20 years ago, when the Clukeys erected a chain fence separating the piece off from the town dock property.

Ownership of the property has been a matter of ongoing dispute ever since, Mr. Maxfield said. At one point in the mid-1960s the Clukeys moved the fence

Opinions

It's 'sock it to me' time

You no doubt remember the unlucky characters on "Laugh In" who used to get beat up on in one way or another whenever they said "Sock it to me!" It seems that the Town of Bethel has taken the role of one of those characters in the eyes of the Department of Environmental Protection. "Sock it to 'em" seems to be the theory of the state agency when it comes to dealing with a small town.

You'll recall that the DEP, with the concurrence of the state Attorney General's office, hit the Town of Bethel with a $35,000 fine as part of a proposed consent agreement on the town's ailing sewer plant.

Granted, from 1982 to 1986, the sewer plant did—with the knowledge of Bethel officials—dump untreated wastes into the Androscoggin River whenever there was a storm runoff because the plant could not handle inflows in excess of 190,000 gallons per day. (Currently, the plant cannot handle inflows greater than 120,000 gallons per day.)

Certainly the Town should be fined because of the action—or inaction—of the officials who accepted the plant and allowed it to operate in an ineffective manner. But $35,000?

Compare the treatment accorded the City of Bangor by the DEP.

Bangor has only a primary level sewer treatment facility, which eliminates only 30 percent of the bad stuff in sewage—as compared to 85 percent removal with primary and secondary treatment, such as Bethel has. The DEP, in June 1987, signed a consent agreement with Bangor whereby that city would design and install a secondary treatment facility and upgrade its sewer lines by 1992. The fine for polluting the Penobscot with 9 million gallons of sewage a day?—originally $140,000, later reduced to $40,000.

The DEP has done its job in the Bethel case by forcing Bethel officials to act. But—now that the officials have agreed to act, and have borrowed a half-million dollars to begin the repair work on the ailing sewer plant—the DEP should back off and not try to squeeze blood from a stone.

As was done in the case of Bangor, the DEP should suspend two-thirds of the fine pending successful completion of the repairs. bfw

Letters to the editor

To the Editor:

In response to letters I've read these past few weeks in the Bethel Citizen it seems that a few people in town are very unhappy with the progress and changes being made here.

Everyone is entitled to their own opinions, of course, but maybe we should think twice about slandering our local businesses in print for everyone to read, and try to be a bit more tactful in our wording.

While I'm on the subject, I'd like to submit a few opinions of my own. While Main Street is the business district and may not be quite as attractive as the other sections of town, it is clean, thanks to the street sweeper and clean-up committee for a terrific job.

Martha's Restaurant has a fine and varied menu, ranging from a variety of seafood dinners to prime rib of veal parmigiana. You can enjoy a hearty meal in a pleasant atmosphere at Martha's.

I also find the Bonnema Potters building very attractive and can't imagine why anyone would complain about it.

It was interesting to note a bit of praise for the former Bragdon apartments (now Dunn Apartments) on our fixing up efforts, even in our present state of clutter. But I was pleased someone noticed we are trying.

Let's continue to show respect for our fellow townspeople and let Bethel be a friendly place to live.

To the Editor:

The purpose of this letter is to respond to Steve Wight's letter [in the May 3 Citizen] in which he inferred from your April 26 editorial ("It's time to save our river") that a Bethel official felt that the Town government had better things to do than worry about cleaning up the Androscoggin River.

Although the editorial may have implied such an attitude, this is certainly not true, as the following facts will point out.

As you are aware, the Town of Bethel sewer treatment plant is in violation of its wastewater treatment license as untreated or inadequately treated wastewater is being discharged into the Androscoggin River during heavy storm periods. Although small, this has contributed to the overall pollution of the Androscoggin River. To rectify this pollution problem both the Board of Selectmen and the town manager have been working hard to upgrade the sewer plant in order to increase and improve its treatment capacity so that this pollution problem can be alleviated. This effort has involved numerous selectmen's meetings, daily dealings with engineers, DEP officials, attorneys, developers, Farmer's Home Administration loan officials, private bank loan officials, raising sewer user fees, and, of course, attending the Special Town Meeting in which the voters approved the loan for upgrading the sewer plant—but only after asking many tough, pointed questions of us.

In summary, it is this type of time-consuming drudgery work by elected and appointed officials which actually gets rivers cleaned up—not rhetoric or speech-making.

In closing, we assume that Mr. Wight's comments were his alone and not those of the very supportive Friends of the Androscoggin.

To the Editor:

For over 69 years, the American Legion Auxiliary has sponsored Poppy Days to remind American that millions have sacrificed their lives and health to keep our nation strong and free.

The poppy, which grew wild on the battlefields of Flanders, became, in the minds of the doughboys of World War I, a symbol of the sacrifice which they had endured. It had flourished among the shelled buildings and the bomb-scarred landscape. Its brilliant red bloom, so much like the blood which had been shed there, became a sign of hope and renewal for those who lived and walked away. For those who would never leave, those who had sacrificed their lives, it was a perpetual memorial to their bravery.

American veterans brought home that image and planted it with the Auxiliary, where it has bloomed every year for the benefit of those who served America. The Memorial Poppy contributions are devoted entirely to rehabilitation and assistance for veterans and their families.

On behalf of America's veterans, thank you for caring.

To the Editor:

I have decided to renew the subscription for my brother, Carroll E. Yates, for one more year. But with the price of your paper going up by leaps and bounds, I rather doubt if I will renew it again. An increase of $5 for one year's subscription is rather ridiculous. I could understand a modest increase, but there is nothing modest about a $5 increase. I fail to see where the paper has improved enough to warrant any such increase.

Russell F. Yates
West Paris

The editor replies: The $5 increase was added in January to those subscriptions mailed outside New England because the post office was charging us that extra amount for our most distant subscriptions. Our regular rate for Oxford County is $10 a year, while our rate for people living outside Oxford County—but within New England—is $13. These rates have not changed recently and are—so far as I am aware—the lowest rates of any paper in Maine.

From Augusta

Sen. R. Donald Twitchell

Support is building in the Legislature for enactment of some form of expanded health care program, including coverage for uninsured low-income families.

The big question is the level of funding such a program will receive in view of the stiff competition for state funds from other pressing issues with major appropriations price tags, such as property tax relief and income tax reform.

A number of proposals with varying approaches to the problem of providing access to health care are under consideration by the legislature. One of the more comprehensive measures, backed by the majority legislative leadership, was the subject of a public hearing last week before the legislative Banking and Insurance Committee. In addition to House Speaker John Martin as prime sponsor, the legislation is co-sponsored by Senate President Charles Pray and Senator Michael Pearson, chairman of the pivotal legislative Appropriations Committee.

The $30 million omnibus health care bill incorporates the recommendations of the Special Commission on Access to Health Care, which filed its report last February, noting that an estimated 130,000 Maine residents are either uninsured or underinsured. The centerpiece of the program is a Medicaid-type "buy-in" provision under which 52,000 adults, children, elderly, and disabled now considered at risk could receive immediate insurance protection.

The state would pay all or part of the insurance premium's cost, depending on an individual's or family's financial circumstances. The premiums of those within 100 percent of poverty guidelines would be fully paid by the state. Partial subsidies, based on a sliding scale, would be provided to those between 100 percent and 150 percent of the guidelines (in the latter case, $17,400 for a family of four). In no case, would an individual's contribution exceed 3 percent of gross income.

Another component of the program would assist small employers in providing an employee health insurance plan. For businesses with less than 10 employees, the state would subsidize the cost of reinsurance for specific coverage of primary care. As an added incentive, the state would offer tax write-downs for three years to small businesses which initiate new health insurance programs for their employees.

Community-based health care programs would also benefit under the proposal. Financial grants would be available to local communities and health care providers to support the delivery of services in areas where there are special needs in accessing health care. Funds would also be allocated for health promotion and health education programs when these services are coordinated with local primary care providers.

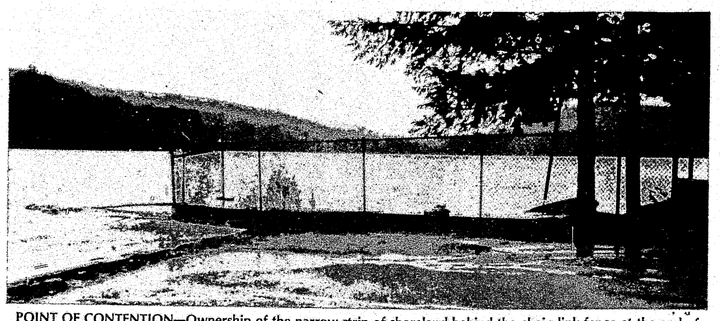
great difference between the older FDA and the newer EPA safety guidelines but also the result of more inclusive testing in New Hampshire. The Maine testing was only for dioxin, whereas the New Hampshire testing was for dioxin and furan (a toxic chemical similar to dioxin).

James River officials, although arguing that the recent New Hampshire warning against eating fish from the Androscoggin River was not warranted, would not say that it was safe to eat fish containing the mill's dioxin. A spokesman at the mill declined to comment when asked if it was safe to eat fish caught below the mill.

An official at the home office, in Richmond, Va., was also hesitant to discuss the safety issue, preferring to discuss only the guidelines used by New Hampshire officials in arriving at their decision to issue the advisory. "James River is not the one to say 'yes' they [the fish] are safe or 'no' they are not safe," said Kathleen Bennett. She added, "We were frankly surprised that they [the New Hampshire public health officials] came out with that announcement."

The James River response to the EPA's proposal for drastically cutting down on the amount of dioxin permitted in mill discharges attacks the proposal from a number of different sides. The report terms the EPA's proposed limitations "unreasonable, arbitrary and capricious, and unsupported by substantial evidence, and in excess of statutory authority."

The James River mill in Berlin discharges a higher concentration of dioxin in its wastewater than any other paper mill in New England, according to the EPA. The Boise mill in Rumford is the second worst offender.



POINT OF CONTENTION—Ownership of the narrow strip of shoreland behind the chain link fence at the end of Lake Street has been the focus of a long-running argument between the Town of Woodstock and Harold and Violet Clukey, owners of the abutting property. A recent attempt by the town to take the disputed land by eminent domain has been stalled by a legal challenge from the Clukeys.

back from the roadway, but at the same time extended if further out toward the lakeshore, effectively cutting off public access to the piece.

The town has taken various legal actions to affirm its right to the land, Mr. Maxfield said, but the litigations have been expensive and so far inconclusive. Attempts at negotiating a settlement have also failed, he said.

He described the eminent domain action as an attempt to resolve the situation once and for all.

"This condemnation action is not directed at the Clukeys, to take something they own," he said. "We just want to clear the record to the land [the town] created and has traditionally used. The time has come when we've got to end it one way or another."

While the town does not concede that the Clukeys have now, or have ever had, any valid ownership claims to the land, the warrant for the special town meeting would have authorized the town to pay them $250 to cover the cost of improvements—primarily the fence and rock wharf—they have made. However, if the town does eventually take over the land, the fence will be torn down, Mr. Maxfield said.

Attempts by The Citizen to contact the Clukeys for comment were unsuccessful.

Sen. Mitchell says...

At a recent Senate hearing on the threats of global warming, Dr. James Hansen, a scientist from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), provided written testimony that had been substantively altered by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

Last week, the Administration refused to support an international convention on atmospheric pollution. The United States is now the only leading western nation not to endorse such a convention—22 nations publicly stated their support for such a convention last March.

Last year, during the campaign, then Vice President Bush said he would "combat the greenhouse effect with the White House effect."

Unfortunately, the White House effect to date is to prevent the United States from regaining its position as a world leader on environmental issue.

The evidence on global warming is strong, and getting stronger. We face the prospect of an unprecedented rate of global warming that could alter the entire global climate system.

Dr. Hansen of NASA testified on May 8 that he believes the greenhouse effect is accelerating, giving us less time to respond to this problem. But the Administration debates whether to support a convention to do something about the problem.

Dr. Hansen also tried to include in his testimony his belief that more frequent droughts are part of the pattern one would expect with the greenhouse effect. The Office of Management and Budget did not approve of Dr. Hansen's conclusion and changed his written testimony to make this conclusion appear less certain.

Government by censorship is unwise. Ignoring or avoiding the truth will produce policies that are unsound because they are based on inaccurate or incomplete information. The Administration's censorship is as self-defeating as it is wrong.

In a recent letter to President Bush, I joined with my Senate colleagues in urging the President to think again about the Administration's practice of censoring scientific data.

"Around the globe, nations are recognizing the threats we face and moving to confront them with comprehensive policy. We are disturbed that our own country responds with silence and worse, by censoring the scientists who provide the facts that, in the past, have formed the basis for our own policy decisions," the letter stated.

"We hope that those editing the testimony of government scientists are not also editing the facts presented to you and by doing so, using the science to fit the policy they prefer—a policy we fear is based on avoidance.

"We are asking for your personal assurances that the testimony of government scientists, to be delivered to Congress or any other body, remains unaltered on questions of science, and that these scientists know that their scientific conclusions will not be threatened by politicians who don't like what the scientists discover."

In a separate letter, members of the Senate also urged the Administration to support the negotiation of a climate convention. The letter states, "...our allies around the world now recognize that global warming could raise sea levels, decimate agriculture, destroy ecosystems and lead to sudden and destabilizing climate events. Global warming calls out for strong Presidential leadership on an international level.

"First we suggest that you instruct the State Department to join other nations...to support the negotiation of a climate convention. Secondly, we urge you to send to Congress a set of proposals to reduce the most important greenhouse gas, carbon dioxide. The United States is the world's largest emitter of carbon dioxide. Without our leadership the nations of this planet cannot begin to solve this problem."

The United States should be leading, not trailing, the effort to convene an international conference on atmospheric pollution. I urge the President to take control of the environmental policies of his Administration, to assert his personal and our national leadership in meeting this global threat.

LURC hearing on Albany 56-unit subdivision gets postponed

The state's Land Use Regulation Commission has postponed a hearing on a proposed 56-unit subdivision in Albany Township. The hearing had been scheduled during the commission's monthly meeting tomorrow (Thursday) and Friday in Farmington.

Despite complaints and a petition from residents in Albany regarding the site for the hearing, the governor and his commission refused to move the site of the hearing in Albany, prefering to hold it on the UMF campus in order to accommodate a separate hearing on a gravel pit near Sugarloaf. It was not immediately clear whether the postponement would cause LURC to reconsider a future site for the hearing. A LURC press release said the postponement was requested by the applicant, who is making changes in his application.

The matter of concern to Albany residents is on a request from JAE Realty Trust, of Massachusetts, for LURC to rezone about 1,000 acres along Rte. 5/35 in Lynchville from general to residential. According to the original petition, the developer would like to establish a 56-lot subdivision on the property.

LURC, which functions as a state planning board for the 500 unorganized territories, such as Albany, had set aside 2½ hours tomorrow night—7-9:30 p.m.— for the public hearing. This is the lengthiest segment of time of any item on the two-day agenda. (The public hearing on the gravel pit has been allocated two hours.)

Sunday River skiway finishes ski season; number of skiers up 9%

Sunday River Ski Resort ended its season last Friday, May 12, after 181 consecutive days of skiing. It was the longest ski season of any resort in Maine or New Hampshire, and the second longest seeason in the resort's 29-year history.

Over 350,000 skiers enjoyed the winter season, representing the resort's ninth straight record season. The ski area posted a 9 percent increase in visits over last winter.

"Sunday River's long-term commitment to snowmaking paid off in consistent, high-quality skiing this winter," said Marketing Director Bill Jensen. "Natural snowfall was disappointing, but we made 700,000 tons of snow. We made a lot of skiers happy."

Fire destroys home on Bird Hill Road

A Woodstock mother and her three children have been left homeless by a Monday morning fire that leveled their mobile home on Bird Hill Road.

The three children—Sandy Day, 18, Mike Piawlock, 11, and Leana Piawlock, 9—were at home of the time of the fire but were not injured. They were treated for possible smoke inhalation at Stephens Memorial Hospital and released.

They and their mother, Mary Day, are now staying at the home of her mother, who lives nearby.

Mary Day reports that the mobile home was insured, and that the family has received numerous donations to help them begin the slow process of rebuilding. She said she hopes to build again on the site of the fire.

Firefighters from Woodstock and Greenwood fought the blaze, but the home was engulfed by flames when they arrived. They stayed at the scene throughout the night, however, putting out the last hot spots at 10 a.m. While they were at the scene, the Bethel Fire Department stood by at the Greenwood station.

The state fire marshall's office is investigating the site to determine the cause of the fire.

Acid rain spells trouble for area corn growers

Acid rain can disrupt the pollination of corn flowers, according to research by Oxford County Extension Agent Frank Wertheim.

Corn plants have separate male and female flowers which rely on cross pollination to produce kernels on an ear. The male flower, commonly known as the tassel, sheds countless pollen grains into the wind—and some of these are caught on the female's silks—long thread-like styles.

When a pollen grain lands on the tip of a silk, it splits open its tough shell and sprouts a finger-like pollen tube, which grows through the silk until it reaches and fertilizes the egg buried deep inside the female flower and ultimately results in the development of a kernel on the ear.

Frank Wertheim and Lyle Craker, at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, recreated acid rain in the laboratory by adding acid over a range of pH treatments (from 5.6 to increasingly acidic 4.6, 3.6, and 2.6) to the silks. The acidity spoilt the pollen's chances of ever germinating and fertilizing the female. Closer inspection under a microscope showed that the tips of the silks were eventually killed at pH levels 3.6 or less, and helps to explain why pollination was affected by acid rain. The pollen tubes themselves may also have been damaged by the acid rain.

Bad pollination means less grain is eventally harvested. Corn usually produces vast quantities of pollen, so any shortfall in pollination is usually overcome by the large number of pollen grains. Drought, insect or disease problems, however, reduce pollen, and—combined with acid rain—could put a crop in trouble.

WORKPLACE COMMUNICATION SEMINAR OFFERED JUNE 6

Workplace communication is the topic of a seminar to be held on Tuesday, June 6, at The Bethel Inn, sponsored by the SAD #44 Adult and Community Education program. The seminar, one in a series of small business workshops, has Joan Martay, a Portland-based training consultant, as the presenter and has been designed to provide training and practice in communication skills essential for effective functioning in a work team or office setting.

Ms. Martay will offer positive approaches for interacting with others in the work environment, covering such topics as assertiveness—what it is and why it works; clarification of needs, setting limits; responding to requests; preventing communication breakdown; assertive listening; resolving problems face-to-face; and applying what you have learned.

Ms. Martay is a staff development consultant, based in Portland, specializing in leadership and interpersonal communication skills. She is an instructor in communications with special conferences and programs at the University of Southern Maine and St. Joseph's College and has more than 10 years of experience in presenting to private and public sector groups.

The workplace communication seminar will be held in the Gibson Room at the Bethel Inn, from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.; the fee of $25 will include breaks and lunch at the Inn. To register, call the SAD #44 Adult and Community Education office, 824-2780, before May 26.

Flood damage

the Androscoggin River had a peak flow of 11,411 cubic feet per second. By comparison, the peak flow during the April Fools Day flood of 1987 was 15,233 CFS.

The local flood damage was far less than that caused by the 1987 flood, but, ironically, it may end up costing local towns more money than the earlier inundation.

In 1987, the towns eventually recovered most of their losses from the federal government; it's not clear that will be the case this time.

Ken Whitman, director of the Oxford County Emergency Management Agency, said it's uncertain that the state suffered the minimum $1 million damage necessary to qualify for federal emergency assistance.

On the brighter side, at least the rain ended the long winter's drought. Through the end of April the area had received less than one-half its normal precipitation. But by the time the rain stopped last week the total figure was slightly ahead of normal, and more rain is scheduled for this week.

As for the jeepers, Mr. Gaudreau reports they took the weather in stride and had a great time anyway. "I'm sure they'll all be coming back again," he said.

Planning Board

the planned construction of a large convenience store on the Sunday River Road could ease any such problem.

The Legislature is currently debating the wisdom of keeping the Sunday closing law on the books. Maine is only one of two states that still has a Sunday closing law.

Mr. Glidden indicated that the law was a benefit to smaller stores, such as his own. If the larger stores are allowed to stay open on Sundays, it would take business away from smaller operators. The [expected cancellation of the] Blue Law is going to close a lot of small stores," he predicted. "You'll see a lot of small communities that won't have a store."

The planned expansion at the local IGA will not only add more retail space, it will also add more parking space. There will be a total of 53 parking spaces, Mr. Glidden told the board, even though only 39 are called for under the Site Plan Review Ordinance.

In other matters, the board also approved a Site Plan Review Permit for The Ski Shop and Sunday River Estates, a combined retail outlet and townhouse project on the Sunday River Road. The owner of the project, Bob Sullivan, a sports store owner from New Hampshire, agreed to put in a dry hydrant on the property. The ski shop will have 4,800 square feet, while on the other side of the subdivision there will be eight townhouses. During the public hearing on the project, no one raised any concerns.

The board looked at a sketch plan for a proposed ice cream stand at the back of the Bethel Craftworks, on Main Street. Owner Don Best said the need exists for such a facility downtown since Edelweiss closed.

The board again discussed the proposal for opening a beauty parlor and barber shop in the Main Street building that already houses a real estate office, a day care center and a children's clothing store, plus an apartment. The discussion centered around the problem of parking. The board instructed the building owners to produce a written agreement from abutter Don Brooks showing permission to use the abutter's land for parking. The board also instructed the owners—Gene and Ginger Kelly—to have the day care center move its playground onto the side lawn and out of the parking lot in order to free up more parking spaces.

The board approved the application from Jan Todd for a retail store—Mainely Fibers—to be operated in her Main Street home.

At the request of Assistant Fire Chief Dave Brown, the board agreed to have developers obtain the fire chief's signature on their final plan before presenting that plan to the board for signing.

As I See It...

Professor John Marini

April Fool's Day this year marked the 200th anniversary of the first meeting of the United States Congress. In the subsequent long history of that body, Congress has become the object of numerous jokes, and a good deal of scorn, which was aptly summed up in Mark Twain's pert comment that the Congress is America's only "distinctly criminal class."

If recent public opinion polls are indication of the current status of this central institution of American government, Congress as an institution is still held in contempt by the American public. Paradoxically, individual members of Congress are held in high regard and have become increasingly immune from defeat at the polls.

Why the ambivalence? Why does the public scorn the institution and yet often admire and vote for its individual members?

The answer lies in the contradictory expectations we have of Congress and congressmen.

In the public mind, Congress as a body is expected primarily to legislate or make general laws in the national interest; and, secondly, to represent and deliberate upon particular or private interests and constituencies of the localities that make up the nation. When it is judged as a body or an institution, Congress is judged on its ability to make good public law in the national interest.

On the other hand, individual members of Congress are more often judged on the basis of their ability to provide the kinds of goods and services that can satisfy the private interests of organized groups, or electorally decisive minorities within a district.

The problem is that it is not possible to make good public law in the general interest and, at the same time, provide the particular necessities sought by the private interests. In the past, this fact was universally recognized. It was one of the fundamental reasons the Founding Fathers set up a federal regime—one where the powers were decentralized. Historically, the national government was governed on the basis of general principles and it was left to the state and local governments (or to the marketplace) to cater to the parochial interests of citizens.

In the 1960s, the situation changed dramatically. With the advent of the Great Society, under Lyndon Johnson, congressman quickly came to the conclusion that they could administer the affairs of local constituents better than local governments. More importantly, they realized that they could do this without taking responsibility for their actions.

The magic wand that gave Congressmen the power to control local affairs (with none of the attendant responsibility) was the federal bureaucracy. During the '60s and '70s, Congress created a bureaucracy whose public mandate was so large, and whose purposes were so broad, that its regulatory power touched upon every interest and aspect of life in society. By delegating its own legislative authority to this bureaucracy, Congress found that it could avoid blame for the obtrusive regulations it wanted to foist upon society.

The result was that Congressmen abandoned their role as legislators. Instead of writing the tough, detailed laws required to implement their intrusive policies, they simply handed the job to bureaucrats. Having reduced their legislative role, Congressmen were free to become administrators rather than lawmakers. Whenever the bureaucracy they had created did something too controversial in their own districts, they simply intervened on behalf of their constitutents and gained a dispensation. So we have it that the very Congressmen who created and authorized the federal agencies that people complain about are now seen as the people's champions against the bureaucracy.

Political scientist Morris Fiorina has gone so far as to describe the current situation thus: Congress, he says, has a federal regulatory agency do the "dirty work" and then it steps in "to redress the grievances that result...Let the agency take the blame, and the member of Congress the credit. In the end everybody benefits. Members successfully wage their campaigns for re-election. And while popularly vilified, bureaucrats get their rewards in the committee rooms of Congress."

While members of Congress and bureaucrats have indeed benefited from this arrangement, the Congress as an institution has not; nor has the nation as a whole.

Self-government requires deliberation and reflection, and the Founding Fathers saw Congress as a place where this could occur. Yet the Congress no longer functions primarily as a deliberative body, considering and debating general laws affecting society. Instead, Congress has reorganized itself in such a way as to allow individual members the authority to control, on a day-to-day basis, the various areas of public policy legally assigned to the bureaucracy.

With so little attention paid to crafting of legislation today, is it any wonder that the quality of our laws have declined? Or that the American people scorn Congress as an institution.

Selectmen

eight people who applied for the full-time position. The town's other reserve officer, Jim Morrissey, is at the police academy.

In other matters, the board, on the suggestion of the town manager, voted 3-0 to hire a part-time office person to send out ambulance and sewer bills. The job is expected to take no more than 13 hours a week once the backlog in billing is cleared up.

"It will more than pay for itself," Selectwoman Pat Dooen said of the new position."

The town manager told the selectmen the town office is five months behind in billing for ambulance services. Because of late billing and non-payment of ambulance bills, the town loses tens of thousands of dollars each year, the bookkeeper told the Budget Committee during budget hearings last month.

In other matters, the board voted, 3-0, to amend the Special Amusement Permit Regulations. The amendments, which took effect immediately, concern the method for dealing with complaints from residents upset by noisy bands. In order to implement the amendments, the town will have to purchase a noise level measuring device, at an anticipated cost of about $735.

The amendments were proposed by a special committee appointed last winter whose task it was to come up with a solution for keeping the peace between the town's entertainment establishments and neighbors. The committee has now been tasked to come up with an overall noise ordinance covering all sorts of noise.

The board, by a 3-0 vote, approved amendments to the town's Traffic Ordinance. The amendments will allow the town to have parking violators towed and imposes $20 fines for parking violations. It also imposes a 15-minute parking limit on Main Street, in the neighborhood of the Sudbury Inn.

The board unanimously denied a request from a Chase Road couple (near Chandler Hill Road) to move the road so it doesn't come so close to their house.

The board, by unanimous vote, agreed to set up a special account for the town farm. The town recently received $1,500 for stumpage at the town farm and the proceeds will go into the new account.

Silkman to speak to health care corporation

Richard Silkman, director of the State Planning Office, will be the featured speaker at the Western Maine Health Care Corporators' 1989 annual meeting tonight (Wednesday), May 17.

Mr. Silkman was appointed state planning director by Governor John McKernan and is responsible for mapping out a strategy for the 1990s that will influence legislative initiatives proposed by the executive branch of Maine's government.

He will be talking specifically about health care in the state and what changes he foresees in both the delivery of health care and how the health care costs will be met. In view of Stephens Memorial Hospital's problems with state regulations, Mr. Silkman's remarks should be timely.

Western Maine Health Care Corporation is the "parent" of Stephens Memorial, as well as four other separate and distinct subsidiaries. These subsidiaries operate independently with their own boards of trustees and are involved in different areas of health care.

Besides Stephens, the other subsidiaries are Market Square Health Care Center, Chapel Valley Boarding Home, Pennesseewassee Land Company and Trillium. The overall mission of Western Maine Health Care Corporation is to provide a continuum of care for the Oxford Hills region. To meet the needs of the people living in this area with low cost, efficient and quality health care is Western Maine Health Care Corporation's objective.

The annual meeting will be held at Goldstreet Restaurant, with coffee and sweets available at 6:30 p.m. The meeting will start promptly at 7 p.m. and all of W.M.H.C.C.'s 480 corporators are expected to attend.

Clough elected head of prep school association

At a recent meeting of educators held in Lincoln, N.H., William Clough, headmaster of Gould Academy was elected president of the Independent Schools Association of Northern New England. This Association is composed of 55 independent schools in Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont, whose heads meet twice annually to study problems and to discuss issues of mutual interest and concern.

The main topic under consideration at the recent spring meeting of the Association was multicultural assessment. The object was to discover more effective ways to recruit and support minority students in a school's population. Randolph Carter, director of minority affairs at the National Association of Independent Schools, Boston, was one of the speakers and discussion leaders. Others included William Polk, headmaster of Groton School in Massachusetts, along with Jack Herney and Verna Mayo, directors of a multicultural program at Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, N.H.

The chief objective of the Independent Schools Association of Northern New England is to improve the quality of education provided by its member schools. Toward that end, in addition to conferences of school heads, there are workshops for school business managers, school secretaries, deans, teachers and directors of studies.

William Clough is also president of the Maine Association of Independent Schools. His two-year term as president ends this month, and he will continue to serve on the association's executive committee for the next two years. His term as president of the Independent School Association of Northern New England is for two years ending in 1991.

Stone barrier to replace W. Paris grist mill dam

Construction work to rebuild the old grist mill dam on the Little Androscoggin River in West Paris is scheduled to begin on July 1.

Bancroft Contracting Corp., of South Paris, has been awarded a $29,500 contract to build a rock dam at the site of the old mill.

The April Fools Day flood of 1987 tore away a timber-crib dam that had served to create a fire pond at the centrally located spot.

The new dam will be made of sturdier stuff. A spokesman for the contracting firm said the new barrier will be made of rocks, anchored in place by granite slabs embedded in the river bed.

The rock dam will be approximately 80 feet long, by 40 feet deep and 6½ feet high. A one-foot wide opening will allow fish to pass through the dam.

DEP grants permit to remove gravel bar from bank of Sunday R.

The Department of Environmental Protection has approved an application by Gerald Harrington, of Bethel, to do some excavation work in the Sunday River on his property. Permission was granted to remove a gravel bar from the east side of the Sunday River as a means of preventing erosion of the west bank.

The work is to be performed between June 30 and Sept. 15, when water is low and trout fry are not present. Gravel is to be removed only to the limit of the former 20-foot-wide channel; the center of the bar, which contains a stand of willows, is not to be disturbed.

The DEP permit was granted subject to conditions concerning the operation of machinery, depth and manner of excavation.

GOODWIN'S INSURANCE is staffed by the knowledgeable and friendly individuals above: Dave Longstaff, Joan Lord, Sandra Porter, Marion Dow, Elaine Pepin, Susan Simpson, and Stuart Goodwin.

This is your Chamber of Commerce

Each week, this column will spotlight a different member of the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce. The purpose is to give some understanding about the various fields of endeavor of the Chamber members.

The Goodwins Insurance Agency Inc. has long occupied a prominent position in the Norway business community since its establishment back in 1865. The company has been at its current 31 Paris St. location for the past 31 years offering all types of insurance including home, auto, and business to clients throughout the entire Oxford County. A few will remember that prior to 1957, the business was conducted from the 158 Main St., Norway address.

Company officials are pleased with the ever-increasing volume of business, especially during the past 10 years, which has shown a tripling of insurance customers. Other accomplishments include receipt of Allstate Insurance's Distinguished Agent Award for placing in the top 5 percent in the country, along with recognition by Travelers Insurance for having the second-longest business relationship with that company.

The recently expanded computer system will do much to make overall operations more manageable and enable the present staff members to further expand Goodwin's insurance offerings.

There are presently 10 persons with Goodwins Insurance, Mr. Robert Goodwin, president; and Stuart Goodwin, David Longstaff, Sandra Porter, Joan Lord, Susan Simpson, Barbara Sandborn—who has been with the company for 30 years—, Elaine Peppin, Marion Dow, and Winfield Partridge—a 35-year employee.

NEWRY COMMITTEE MEETS

The next meeting of the Newry Growth Management Advisory Committee is scheduled for Tuesday, May 23, at 7 p.m., in the Newry town office. West Paris

By MIRIAM INMAN

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Doughty and Altheare Field went on a mini-cruise on the Scotia Prince, from Portland to Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, and back last weekend.

The camping season is upon us, despite the lousy weather and Ann Proctor and Ivan Jr. spent their first weekend at their trailer in Stratton. They had some rain, some sun and some mosquitos. Something to look forward to on Memorial weekend (the mosquitos).

Brant Sanborn was with his grandparents, Vernon and Miriam Inman, Friday through Sunday while his parents attended a wedding in Saratoga Springs, N.Y. He is 13 months old and busy; and so were we.

Hope everyone remembers about the special entertainment by William Flavin on Friday evening, May 19, at 7:30, at the Historical Society Building. Mr. Flavin is a former resident and now resides in Milton, Mass., and teaches at Curry College.

Forward Fellowship will meet on Monday evening, May 22, for their annual supper outing. Members are to meet at the church at 5:30 p.m.

Tri-Town Rescue

The auxiliary has planned a public baked bean supper Saturday, May 20, from 5:30 to 7 p.m., at the Tri-Town Rescue barn at Trap Corner. The menu includes baked beans, casseroles, cole slaw, rolls and homemade pies for dessert.

The Walk/Bike-a-thon has been rescheduled for Sunday, May 21, starting at 12:30 p.m., at the Agnes Gray School gym, in West Paris. The total 10-mile trip will travel up Rte. 219 to Greenwood City and Hicks Pond and back to the elementary school.

Rain cancelled the Maine State Parade last Saturday. The dancing TTAERS (potatoes) were to be in that parade.

Training this month is with Dr. O'Meara on Wednesday, May 24, at the Trap Corner barn. Please note the change in time from the usual 7 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

Rain, rain go away; come again in the summer when the gardens are in need of it. The wells, I understand, have now got enough water. One woman who had to be careful all winter was telling how nice it was to have water to wash blankets for summer and do spring cleaning.

May 12, no school and watching the river one sees a lot of debris go down. Logs, trees and I suppose anything else that is in the way as it keeps rising along the banks. That is one of the things that I like about living so close to the river, is a different scene so often, and have been told the bank to the river is so high all of West Bethel village would be flooded before it got over this bank.

We had an early Mother's Day get-together the weekend of May 6. "Frankie" brought Theresa here Saturday morning, and Jim came from Freeport with Heather. (He had to go right back as they were having trouble with L.L. Bean's computers.) George stayed over Saturday as well as both grandchildren. Sunday, Wilfred and Kim came. Kim brought dinner and cooked it. After his work Ira and Kristen came over to visit so invited them for supper. Jim and Sue came to pick up Heather, so were all here at one time, but Wilfred and Kim had to leave before Jim and Sue showed.

May 5, Pastor and Evelyn Larson dropped in for a short visit. May 9, picked up Sylvia Benson and we drove to Wilton to look at a wooden table but knew it wouldn't be solid enough for my purpose so will keep looking.

May 11, Frank went down to visit Don Brooks who is at home but will still be awhile before be can do very much. Guess I have rambled on enough about the happenings here.

Ernest and Alberta Angevine had Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Sweener, of Colchester, Vt., for Sunday callers.

May 6, Sylvia Benson took her sister, Dot Everett, to her home on Paris Hill and then drove to her sister's, Judy Small, in Hebron for a night; Sylvia and niece Kim Small went to Ocean Pearl at Oxford Plaza to eat.

Dennis Smith has bought a piece of land from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Smith, and is building a home.

Homer, Edie and Andy Smith went to East Conway, N.H., Wednesday evening to Larry and Sally Smith's to see their new granddaughter and nephew. Brother Zack, three, is very proud of his sister.

Friday night, Sarah Coolidge spent the night with Jamie Lewis in West Bethel. The same night Erin Osgood spent the night with Vicky Coolidge, and Saturday night Cindy Wheeler spent the night with Jessie Coolidge. The Coolidge girls are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Coolidge.

May 2, Bob Howe and family attended the Read-to-me Club award and taco testing banquet at Telstar cafeteria. This is affiliated with the Kindergarten program that Seth Howe attends.

May 4, Bob Howe and family went to Bob's mother's, Joan Howe, birthday party. The party was held at Joan's mother's, Ethel Ward, in East Bethel.

Dr. Leonard Shaw and family drove to Braintree, Mass., April 31 to visit Dr. Shaw's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Jules Shaw, for the day. The Shaw's took Jon and Jen to the Prudential Building in Boston, which was where their mother, Becky Shaw, worked. They also visited other places of interest in Boston.

May 6, Dr. Shaw and family went shopping in Portland and to eat out.

Saturday, Mary Beth Hannon took her SAT at Gould, and then Elaine, Misty and Shilo Hutchins and Sally, Mary Beth and Amy Hannon went to Portland Mall shopping and to eat.

May 6, Matthew, Melinda and Stephen Bishop, of Norway, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bishop, of Bucksport, and Scott Mason, of Rumford, were at Ruth and Charles Mason's for supper; also "Chuckie" and Kathy Mason and family. Grammie Murphy (Ruth's mother) made the beans and rolls for all. Mrs. Pat Murphy, Bridge Street, does this for three families every Saturday. The next day Matthew, Melinda, Ruth, Jennifer, Charles Jr. and Mari went to pick a bouquet of Mayflowers for Grammie Murphy, as she is lame and not able to go into the woods herself.

Sunday, "Chuckie" and Kathy Mason and Gerry Shimamura went with the Nazarene Church Group to visit with the patients at Ledgeview Nursing Home in West Paris. Gerry's mother, Thelma Merrill, is one of the patients, as are Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Lapham from this road.

Kristen Gibson and Donna McCarraher went to Portland, May 11.

May 12, Jim Gibson came to visit for a few minutes as he was on his way home after spending most of the week at Bethel Inn with the L.L. Bean convention. Evelyn Hilborn also spent a while in the afternoon.

Evelyn Hilborn recently returned from her home in Toronto, Ontario. While there she celebrated her 65th birthday with her brother, family and friends. She took two trips to northern Ontario. Canada geese were returning, also saw deer, muskrats and beaver at work. In Toronto, Evelyn and friend took in a large British Exhibition, featuring London Police band, other entertainment and various products. Did mowing and planting as Toronto was much warmer than here.

Birds at the birdfeeder at Evelyn's have been purple finches, myrtle warblers, rosebreasted grosbeaks, a bluebird and others. The phoebes have had their family already.

Sid Murphy saw a moose on way to work and others have sighted the moose. Some have seen a bull, some a female and others a yearling.

Through a 10-year-old's eyes

By ALEX GILLIES

There are two major problems in buying a Mother's Day present: 1) what to get, and 2) how to pay for it. I can't tell you what I got because my mother's going to read this. Sorry. If you're having a financial problem, make her something. They usually like that a lot. If you can't think of anything just make a nice card.

I just got back from canoeing in the field in front of our house. We went over the road and just cruised around. Most of the cars that went by beeped and waved. A lot of caterpillars were hanging on for dear life on the grass sticking up above the water. The water was up to four feet deep in some spots. It was pretty cold.

At school we have a science project due in five days. I've got the final draft half done. I still have to do a model and a poster. The science fair will be held on the 18th of May at Telstar. I'm doing mine about the eye.

Newry

By AMY HANSCOM

The Board of Selectmen met last Tuesday morning. There are six dog owners who have not licensed their dogs and a dog warrant was issued to dog officer Alan Fleet. Unless these licenses are paid, together with the extra charge for collecting, owners may be summoned to court.

A warrant was prepared for the Special Town Meeting, to be held May 30, to see if the Town will vote to accept ordinance changes proposed by the Ordinance Review Committee. These ordinances include road ordinance, sign ordinance, building code and shoreland zoning ordinance. Another article to be voted on is to see if the Town will vote to allow $7,500 from the Fire Department Fund monies to purchase additional equipment needed to bring the Fire Department up to standards to allow citizens to get a reduced rate on fire insurance premiums. A public hearing on the proposed ordinance changes will be held at the Town Office, May 22, at 7 p.m.

The selectmen attempted to check camps on Puzzle Mountain for tax purposes, but were unable to do so because of muddy road conditions. It is expected that work on perambulating the Newry-Andover West Surplus line will start May 17.

Marjorie Osgood and son Wade, Brenda Wight and daughter Katie, and Wendy Hanscom and son Jay attended Kindergarten at Bethel, Thursday evening, May 4. The children will start school next fall.

Derek Vail, son of Joan Bartlett, graduated from the New England School, Husson College, Bangor, in the field of Broadcasting.

Lisa Vail was guest of honor at a personal shower at the municipal building, May 6. Patricia Mank and Joan Bartlett were hostesses. Refreshments, including a decorated shower cake, were served. She received many gifts. Attending, besides the honored guest and hostesses, were Veronica Smith, Carolyn Bennett, Karlene Bachelder, Gilberte Seeley, Chesley Bartlett and Grace and Cindy Lane, of Newry, Karen Gould and Kitty Fox, of Bethel, Heather and Adrienne Vail, of Locke Mills, and Roxanne Wentworth, of Wentworth Location, N.H.

Christine Wyeler and Arnold Penney were united in marriage in a simple ceremony at the Newry Community Church, May 6, at 6:30 p.m. Pastor Rodney Hanscom performed the ceremony. The couple's attendents were Elizabeth and Joshua Penney. Sylvia Gray, aunt of the bride, was organist. After the ceremony Sylvia Gray served dinner to the bride and groom and their guests. The wedding cake was made and decorated by Mrs. Gray. Attending were Christine's parents, Noella and Lewis Harris, and Christine's sister and husband, Faith and Bruce Bradley, from Connecticut, and Sylvia and Parker Gray, of Newry. The couple will reside in Rumford Point.

The title of Pastor Hanscom's message, May 7, was "Look up to Jesus," with Scripture readings the 97th Psalm and Acts 1:1-14.

Wendy Hanscom was guest of honor at a personal shower, May 6. Attending besides the honored guest were Eleanor Davis and Sylvia Wight, of Newry, Christine Hanscom, Christine and Becky Hanscom, Nancy Hanscom and Kathy Hanscom, of Bethel, and Frances Davis, of Upton. The cake was made and decorated by Kathy and Nancy Hanscom. Wendy received gifts from guests, also from some who were unable to attend.

Betsy Clark, Sylvia Wight, Louise Tetley and Gilberte Seeley were at Oxford Lanes, Rumford, bowling May 9. Louise was high scorer on both single and triple.

The Mothers Club met at the municipal building, May 8, with 14 members present. The meeting was opened by president Cindy Moxcey and Gilberte Seeley read the Ode to Mothers. It was voted to give scholarships in memory of Eleanor Morton and Jeannine Fleet to the most deserving graduates of the Class of 1989 of Telstar High School. Also voted to have the trip to Storyland for Newry children on June 19. It was voted to have the annual banquet at the Town and Country on June 12, at 6 p.m. Karlene Bachelder won the mystery prize. Ken Staler and Elaine Suddeth, of Hurricane Island Outward Bound, gave a lecture and showed color slides of their projects of rebuilding the confidence of young people who come from broken and disturbed homes and never had the chance to deal with the world at large. They take outdoor trips and camp out in the mountains in some of the spots like Table Rock, etc. They learn canoeing on the lakes and how to live and share duties with their peers. They also get counseling. The club feels that this is a wonderful program and appreciated the chance to learn what they do.

Angela Thomas-Jones spoke on chemical dependency treatments at Dublin, N.H. This program is different than most. These programs take place in the wilderness, with the help of Hurricane Island Outward Bound School. It is a long program and the hope is that when it is over the adolescents are free of dependence and will be able to cope without drugs. The family also plays an important part in this program. Anyone interested in this program can contact them by calling toll free in New England, 1-800-0200, Treatment in Motion.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Wight spent last weekend in Old Town visiting Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Wight and Mr. and Mrs. David Wight and families.

Bear River Grange will put on a public baked bean and ham supper at the Grange Hall, May 27, at 5:30 p.m.

FRANKLIN GRANGE

Franklin Grange joined with Mt. Sugarloaf at Oxford Grange Friday night with a 6 p.m. supper served by the host Grange before the meeting. Mt. Sugarloaf filled the chairs and Franklin put on a Mother's Day program as follows for 63 members.

"How do you do" and "M is for the million things she gave me" by all. Paul Billings read a poem, "That's Mother." His mother was asked to stand. The poem was very fitting for her, too. Mary Billings surely fit the picture of Mother. Carl Brooks danced two of his doll family. A quiz, "What Kind of Mother Are You?" Papers were passed out and they scored themselves on questions the lecturer read. A bouquet of flowers was given the winner. Russell Yates read three cute stories, then Bertha Benoit sang, "Mother My Mother," an original song by the lecturer. Charlotte Cole entertained with harmonica and guitar solo and then yodeled a song. Lettie Brooks read Mother's Day reading. Russell Yates and Peggy Blake put on a cute skit.

A contest by three groups from each Grange with Stacey Bisbie, Olive Risco, and Jean Griffin as captains. Stacey's group won chocolate bars for each. They used Mother's Day and made as many words as possible while Richard's orchestra played several songs. Time was up then. Then the closing thought, "How to Bring up Children" by the lecturer.

The song "Mother Machree" was requested and the program closed with "God be with you."

The next, or third, meeting will be at Mt. Sugarloaf on June 15, who will serve supper; Franklin Grange will bring pies; Oxford, salads. Program, Oxford; Franklin will try to hold down the chairs.

See you there.

East Bethel

By MYRA FOSTER

Mrs. Agnes Haines, Mrs. Peggy Coolidge and Mrs. Floribel Haines went to Gorham and Belin, N.H. with the Bethel Senior Citizens, May 10.

A big Balm of Gilead tree fell onto the roof of Almon Coolidge's house a week or so ago. Not too much damage was done but it sure scared Peggy. I can imagine how she felt, as we had a maple come down unexpectedly, which just cleared the house—this was a couple of years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. John Swan, of Dixfield, and Mrs. Verna Swan and Miss Clara Whitman, of Bryant Pond, were weekend visitors at the Bartlett Homestead.

Mrs. Dori Holman and daughter Heather, of Durham, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Harrington, Sunday, May 6.

Paul and Chester Kimball were in Norway shopping Thursday, May 11.

Mrs. Charlotte Kimball and I were in Rumford, May 4, to see Dr. Kirn. Then we went shopping. Mrs. Clara Hamlin, of South Waterford, took me to John and Agnes Foster's home in Andover on May 7 for a Mother's Day celebration. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stearns; Mr. and Mrs. Rick Westleigh, of Rumford Corner; Mrs. Jo Tyler and Chris, of Dixfield; Darryl Tyler and friend, of Dixfield; Eric and Shanna Westleigh, of Rumford Corner; and Dan Stearns and children, Cory and Erin, of Rumford Point.

On May 10, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stearns took me to Rumford Point at the home of Dan Stearn's to celebrate Cory's birthday and Erin's birthday, whose was May 9.

Mrs. Richard Stearns, of Rumford Corner, took me shopping in Rumford on Thursday evening.

The rain that we had last week rutted out portions of the road across from the driveway. The water made a big pond on both sides of the road. We should have gotten enough rain to make the norm for now. When we will need it in the summer probably we won't get it. But we are luckier than out west and midwest as they had less rain this winter than usual in California. It was 10 inches less than the normal rainfall. Suppose it is the greenhouse effect.

The rain covered my daffodils and came in places through to the dooryard. Cars certainly made a splash when they went through the water covering the road. When the culvert was put in years ago my husband David wanted them to put in a much bigger one for which he would pay half—for two reasons: one, he knew this one couldn't take the water coming from the mountain, and two, he wanted it big enough so the cattle could go through into the upper pasture. But c'est la vie.

Alder River Grange will hold a meeting May 19 at 7:30 at the Grange Hall.

CARD OF THANKS

We would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone for everything you did for us. Having to close Edelweiss was difficult; because it was not due to lack of business, but due to circumstances that we had no control over.

We'll miss you all. Thanks again.

North Paris

By DORIS C. LAWRENCE

As I write the news this Friday morning it sure is raining, and it poured all night. I cut Vernal Hart's hair Thursday morning and he said his well was full.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Vatcher are home from Sidney, Nova Scotia. He said they had a lot of rainy weather up there.

The flea market and food sale was a great success; also the dance the same night.

Don't forget the supper at North Paris Hall, May 27, 5-6 p.m. Beans, salads, casseroles, biscuits, rolls and homemade gingerbread with "real" whipped cream. We won't have another supper until the last of July on account of graduation, weddings and anniversary.

Callers at the Lawrences have been Mione Record, Jimbo Coffin, Odell Heath, Richard Felt, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Millett; Barbara Gallant gave me a perm Wednesday.

Greenwood City

By COLISTA MORGAN

As the sun rose this morning a colored ribbon waved across the hills. How lovely the maple buds are at this time. The shadows crept along with stillness on the pond, changing with the mood of the sun. I watched as I ate my breakfast and welcomed a new day.

At a distance the pine branches seemed to be tier to tier, a stately gueen of dignity and grace. They give us a strange and restless kind of music.

At dawn now, there is a sense of adventure and aliveness. Trees are more sharply etched, the horizon more distinct than at any other time of day.

The red winged blackbirds talked from the bushes on the shore.

A rock just down the pond awakened to spring in small ways. Where the moss is just greening, spiders spew out from under it. A few clover leaves are folded in patterns of pale green. I am reassured to know that the pond is coming alive again. It's a grand place for a turtle or a gull to sun itself.

A chirping red squirrel scolded at me, sounding like a child's toy wound up tightly and running down with a clattering, clacking sound. He rattled like a bluejay, screeching out of temper because a stranger had entered his forest.

Far down the pond, the cattails stood frayed by winds and bedraggled in the snow and rain, arose above a matted pale-tan mass of last year's leaves.

On my way back home I again thought how fortunate I have been to have lived in such pleasant places.

The Holt families were home for the weekend to celebrate their mother's—Fay's—birthday. I was with them also. Several of us went to Ann's in Bethel, Saturday evening, and to David's home in Steep Falls, Sunday.

The heavy rains flooded my basement for the first time in nearly 30 years. So I had a lot to do there.

I attended the Delta Kappa Gamma meeting at the Moses Mason House in Bethel on Saturday.

Rena Curtis has driven to Brunswick nearly every day to visit her sister, Ruth Collins, who remains very ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Inman, of West Paris, spent the weekend at Camp Maplewood.

The new owners of Camp Suitsme were here for the weekend.

The Board of Selectmen meets at the Town Office on the first and third Thursdays of the month, at 6:30 p.m.

Al Gagnon has accepted the appointment as fire warden. Arthur Couture remains on the job as building inspector.

The Town Office is open for business on Tuesday, 10 a.m. to 12, on Thursday, 6-8 p.m., and by special arrangement by calling 533-2581.

Lucy Nelson has been appointed librarian and may be reached by calling 533-2085.

The town dump is open 12-2, Sunday, and 3-5, Wednesday, for two-legged citizens only. The four-legged ones claim round-the-clock entry and scatter liberties.

If I were being threatened by one of these black bruins, and a man and a gun were nearby, I would hope he would attempt to rescue me and not think of not having a license or closed season and taking his chances on the illegality. Be an Ollie North in a small way.

The newspaper will be flooded with flood reports. We had our personal excess of water as we collected about 100 gallons of rain water and had just gotten a dozen gallon jugs of spring water from a roadside pipe when our pipeline thawed and the water gushed full speed from the faucet. A ditch outside the house got plugged and water covered the workroom floor and was threatening the rest of the house. Life can get hectic.

Early spring flowers are coloring the garden and the rhubarb is sprouting. To use up the last of last years' canned rhubarb, I mixed a pint of it with a can of crushed pineapple and some honey. This made a real nice sauce.

There will be a rabies' clinic on Friday, May 19, in Errol, N.H. For further information check with the town clerk, Clayton Thompson, or Dr. Hudson, of Bethel.

We had a whatzit recently. Several people heard a sound like a long roll of thunder, but the sky was clear and blue and no storm followed. We checked for sonic booms but there were no planes seen or heard. One resident reported her house shook, dishes rattled and she thought earthquake but did not hear of one reported by weather bureau.

Ellie Lecomte, Virginia Williamson and the Berniers were among the Upton people attending the wedding and reception of Christine Largesse and Jock Morton, of Newry. There were about 200 relatives and friends from several states and towns present. The bride was dressed in a long white gown, the maid-of-honor, Perdita Davis, wore burgandy, the bridesmaids Penny and Candy Lavallee and Timia Seagar, wore pink. David Hunt was best man, Mike Largesse, brother of the bride, Peter Morton, brother of the groom, and Bone Gauthier were ushers. The men wore pink sashes and ties. Pastor Rust, of the West Bethel church, was assisted by Pastor Hanscom, of the Newry church, where the ceremony was held. The reception was held at the Bethel Inn. I neglected to get the names of the flower girl and the ring bearer, who were a lovely part of the service.

The Plus Side

Need cash? Beware of hidden risks. Some people, intent on paying off one thing, put another at risk.

Reverse mortgages may be one answer, but you should read all the fine print and ask plenty of questions.

Question—"My house needs some pretty major repairs and a friend suggested a reverse mortgage. Is that a good idea?"

Answer—Not unless you can sleep comfortably with the thought of possibly losing your home. If your income is limited, you should check first to see if you qualify for a low-income government home improvement loan. A reverse mortgage might be considered if a person is house-rich and cash-poor and hopes to turn equity in his home into cash for his declining years. Even so, a responsible third party should be consulted before entering into any agreement that endangers your home.

Although reverse mortgages sound like the wave of the future, the best advice is wait. New programs are being considered that offer more flexibility, availability and certainty of cost. For further information, telephone your local Area Agency on Aging, or write, Maine Committee on Aging, State House Station 127, Augusta, 04333.

West Bethel

By CONSTANCE BROADBENT

Dear Muddy:

As I sit down to write this Mother's Day-plus-three epistle, I am still fuming. An hour or so ago, as I stood dreamily at the kitchen sink, rinsing utensils and watching the mountains, I was suddenly blasted from my reverie by strange movement at the bird feeder below. By the time I adjusted my near vision, I caught the climax of a scene that has me seething, even as we speak. A neighbor cat had shinnied the pole, clung to the feeder shelf with one front paw and before I could cry out my objection, snatched a junco in the free paw. The calico criminal swept the helpless aviator into it jaws and leapt to freedom—all in a matter of seconds. A hasty, but angry search of the premises turned up no grinning cat or tiny bird bones. But believe me, the case is not closed.

Enough of my complaints. How are you faring? Hopefully your patient is on the mend? Tell Aunt Gen that we send our love and healing good wishes. Perhaps you'd both like to continue the rehab at the Maine-ger? I'm sure that I could arrange it for you; I have an "in" with the innkeeper.

West Bethel is a bustling village and this past week was typical. People enjoyed bellringers at church; Republicans ate turkey at the Grange Hall; one group did two trips to New Hampshire; and some went hiking and fishing.

The Junior Bellringers of the West Parish Congregational Church (downtown Bethel) stood like white-gloved angels before the West Bethel Union Church congregation last week, and under the inspiring direction of their pastor, Jean Bass, they pumped out a series of familiar hymns. While their lips kept the count, their young gloved fingers gripped the brass cloches, and sweet music filled the air. Enough to move one to tears of joy, I tell you.

Martha and Lydia Grover, of the West Bethel church, were among the performers. Martha, by the way, was ringing in her ninth birthday at the same time. Her Aunt Suzanne and Uncle Rupert Grover Jr., of Norway (Maine), were among the well-shod well-wishers present for the occasion. We all got extra hugs that day. And we welcomed a new member to the fold at the same time. Ruth Ann Cutler has recently moved to West Bethel from Marlborough, Mass., and on that Sunday she took her place as a church member. Deacon Dewey Thayer assisted Reverend Norman Rust with the induction.

A few days later, down the road at the Grange Hall, a group of industrious Grangers prepared and served a turkey dinner for the spring meeting of the Oxford County Republican Committee. The diners gathered in great numbers (almost to overflowing) to enjoy the fruits of the Grange labor; the Grangers wound up the evening tired, but richer. Everyone left happy.

Speaking of happy times, Helen Saunders, Colleen Boyd, Dot Bean and Frances Bennett (Main Street) headed west for Shelburne, N.H., recently to attend a bridal shower for Diane Leger. Diane will marry Dan Gorham, who is nephew, grandnephew or cousin to all of the above. And in the same week, Helen and neighbors Frances Bennett (Main Street), Frances Bennett (Pleasant Valley Road), Grace Morrill, Clara Rolfe and Joyce Bennett motored to Gorham, N.H. to the American Legion Hall. The occasion was the annual meeting of the Bethel Senior Citizens, which boasts about 70 members. Charter members Sarah Stevens and Barbara Douglass received corsages and recognition on the anniversary of the group's founding. The members enjoyed lunch and entertainment provided by the Market Squares quartet. Their barbershop renditions of well-known melodies topped off a delightful gathering.

Meanwhile, out in Mason, folks took a break from field-dressing (see last week's issue for description) and took to the woods. Donald and I joined Ina and Rupert Grover on a most pleasant afternoon hike over the same trails that we skied so often this winter. How different they looked in their barely green dress. Brooks, swelled with recent rain, bubbled at every turn; at some points we had to create bridges to carry us over the swollen places (Ina got "Sea-bee of the Day" for that).

Later, at a favorite fishing hole, I encountered yet another new experience (will they never end?). I fished. Yes, I, who have managed for half a century, while growing up a tomboy (as you well know) and raising three anglers, to avoid casting anything remotely resembling a worm, found myself reeling in the line with Ina's encouragement. Before I knew it, I was squealing with beginner's delight as a small, but legal brook trout dangled before my eyes. The landing was followed by casting instruction, how-to-get-the-tangled-line-out-of-the-tree-instruction and how-to-hook-the-next-nibbler-instruction. All of this took place under Ina's tranquil tutelage at water's edge while the husbands dallied in the dinghy.

And so I became a "fish-ion-ado" in a flash. Little did I know that I'd become a fisher so fast; I went with the intention of watching.

Watching is our very recent pastime. The week wound up in torrents of rain (much needed, but more than manageable). And so everyone watches the sky for breaks in the clouds, watches the rivers and streams as they swell to overflowing, watches the weather forecaster for word of let-up or warning.

As we all watch and wait, grass grows, tulips bud, daffodils pop up in unexpected places and the manure gives up its goodness to the soil. Mother Nature will have her way.

So, Mother dear, that's my week as it was, complete with killer cat. Hug Mary Genevieve gently for us. Tell her we'll be down soon to say hello.

I'm off to target practice…and then it's "Stalking the Wild Calico"…

Happy Mother's Day again. This year I'm buying you a tree for my front yard…maybe a maple.

Love, C.B.

GED Week a success

The SAD #44 Adult and Community Education program held a special GED session at the Andover fire station during GED Week, observed throughout the state last week.

According to Cathy Newell, director of adult and community education, several new GED students took advantage of the Andover session, as well as others who were in the process of testing already. There is no charge for GED preparation or testing in SAD #44 so that those who missed the special state promotional week should not feel left out.

Mrs. Newell will be back in Andover, at the Andover Elementary School, on Monday, May 15, and Monday, May 22, 6:30-9 p.m., to offer GED testing. GED testing is available during day or evening hours throughout the week at Telstar High School in Bethel.

Those interested may call, 824-2780, or stop in at the Adult Education office, which is just inside the main high school entrance.

By VIVA WHITMAN

Another cloudy morning greets us today. Seems as though we have seen more cloudy days than sunshiny ones lately. As Russell says, the garden won't dry enough to plant it with so much rain. It is so very wet from the last deluge of rain that we need several days of sunshine to dry it enough to work on it. Oh well, just hope and pray for better weather is all we can do, I guess.

Last week sure was a busy one around here. Peggy has started work putting out greeting cards for LaVerdiere's at South Paris and Bridgton and went on Tuesday of last week to do this. Wednesday was the day for her to take me to see the doctor in North Bridgton and she was busy in the afternoon making cream puffs for the Senior Citizen dinner to take place on Thursday. Got up on Thursday morning and finished the cream puffs and she and Russell went to Bryant Pond to help with the Senior Citizen dinner. Came home a little early as she had to take me to Lewiston for a checkup after the operation and at the same time she met the woman who is showing her how to set up the cards, etc. at the stores. They met in the parking lot while I was in seeing the doctor.

Friday was another full day as Peggy and Russell went for groceries and then in the evening they went to Oxford to Grange for another three point meeting. Also helped out with the program by putting on a short skit.

Saturday morning we were up early getting Russell ready to leave with Peggy to go to Augusta where they participated in a contest for the assistant and lady assistant. They had to go through the ritual that they do in Grange meeting. They didn't win any prizes but had a good time and said it was very educational for them. Charlotte Cole had come down and gone with them that morning. In the evening, they all got ready and went to West Paris for the dance. Don't know where they found the energy, but they went anyway.

Sunday, Peggy went to West Bethel to visit her daughter, Loretta Merrill, and family. Didn't stay too long as they were going to Portland to visit their daughter, so Peggy went to East Andover to visit Laura Hutchins and on her way home stopped to visit an old friend, Ivy Bartlett. She didn't get home very early.

I stayed home most of the time fighting this cold, which I swear is more like bronchitis than a cold. I have just about coughed my head off and have a very sore tummy from the operation and with all this coughing. If I had a gentle cough it wouldn't hurt so bad, but I have a cough that just about vibrates the trailer so it makes me very sore. Antibiotics haven't gotten rid of it and I for one don't know what will.

Decided it wouldn't hurt anything more than anything else on Monday and went to town to get some more medication as well as do a little shopping. Got a few items that I need for my trip to Colorado and still have a few more to get. Just got to get over this mess I have before that time comes—and it is coming fast.

Russell had planted some of his flowers that came and would like to plant more of the vegetable garden if it wasn't so wet. Can't even work it with the rototiller, it is so wet. However, his peas that he planted out front are coming up so guess they didn't freeze or get washed away.

He has got to plant his begonias pretty soon by the looks of them. They are in the middle room here and if you could see how they have grown you would find it hard to believe. They are the tuberous ones and do well if they don't get much sun. He has had some in a window box the past two years but has more this year than the window box will hold, so don't know just where he will plant them, but he will put them somewhere where they will look pretty.

Don't see much of the squirrels now and not so many birds at the feeder. Russell has run out of seed and says that he will wait till next fall to start again as the seed costs so much. The birds can get what they need pretty well now without the snow and cold so guess they will get by all right. I do miss watching them, but there is so much to see now that I guess I can wait till fall for them to come again.

No special news from Mary this week, only that West Paris Grange had a good turnout at the dance last Saturday night and that there will be a meeting of the Grange on May 18. It will be the Memorial meeting so should have a good program. There will be refreshments after the meeting so come and enjoy.

Hope everyone has a good week ahead and don't get moldy from all the rain and wet. Take care and good health to all.

TOM PENA TAKES A LOOK OVER HIS SHOULDER to see if anyone is catching up to him on the three-mile run from Songo Pond to the Gould campus. Don Best actually did catch him later on, but Tom raced away from him going up Mill Hill. Tom and teammate Kevin Davis were the overall winners of the triathlon, and also the winners of the two-man category.

ROBERT RHU emerged mud-splattered from the dark woods during the mountain bike portion of last week's Gould triathlon. He proceeded to Songo Pond, where teammates paddled the canoe portion of the race. A fourth teammate then handled the running chores.

So. Woodstock

By OLIVE R. DAVIS

Mrs. Goldie Mason is giving a six-week course on heath food to 24 students, at present, at the Oxford Hill High School. Dr. Ronald Davis, of Yarmouth, comes up and gives lectures on the subject working in conjunction with Mrs. Mason. This is an adult course but anyone who is interested can join the class. A banquet will be held at the close of these meetings at the school with a sample of the recipes that have been in their cookbooks, which were passed out to the group during the six weeks.

Donald Mason has built a house on his land at the end of Curtis Hill road.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Andrews called on their aunt, bringing her a Mother's Day aunt card. They took off Olive's double windows, which was nice.

Sylvia has had the cast removed from her forearm at last. It is still painful. Sometimes we have too many knock-outs all at once, and this has been hers.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Brooks took Bertha Benoit and Olive Davis to Oxford, Friday night, where they took part in a three point meeting with Oxford and Mt. Sugarloaf Granges.

We had another rainy day Saturday. It's helping the grass to grow green again anyway, and we need it.

Some changes are being made on Curtis Hill. Peter Demarest is having his home moved off the wooded hill below the road beside the new home of his father, Donald Demarest. Peter is using father's garage for a body shop at present.

A pond has been made on the left hand side of the road where the trees were all removed below Mark and Peggy Turk's new house on Curtis Hill.

A new house is being built near Cumming's turn by Irwina Kennison Smith. She has been living in California for some time.

MISS BILLHEIMER TO WED

Mr. and Mrs. David Billheimer, of Tenants Harbor, are pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter, Carrie Grace, to James Gorman, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Gorman, of Bethel.

The wedding is planned for July 1, at Tenants Harbor.

THIS WEEK AT THE Moses Mason House

The 10th annual Faye Taylor Memorial Art Show will be held Saturday, May 27, in the meeting room of the Dr. Moses Mason House, beginning at 10 p.m. and continuing throughout the day until 4 p.m. The show will feature competition among students of SAD #44, grades 1-6. Since this year is the 200th anniversary of Dr. Moses Mason's birth, the theme this year should relate in some way to that important milestone. Anyone having questions should direct them to the Society's office, at 824-2908.

Dr. Moses Mason's 200th birthday will be observed on Sunday, May 28, in the house on Broad Street he occupied during his lifetime. A special exhibit on his life and times will open in the meeting room and Society Director Stanley R. Howe will make a presentation concerning some of the highlights of his life. The hours of the birthday party will be 2-4 p.m. This event officially inaugurates the 1989 summer season at the Dr. Moses Mason House.

Congratulations are in order for three couples, all members of the Bethel Historical Society, who recently celebrated 50 years of marriage: Herb and Ruth Kittridge, Jack and Eleanor Parsons, Dana and Barbara Douglass.

Ruth Brown Salo, of South Paris, and Julia Bumpus Berndt, of Springvale, have presented the Society with a copy of their genealogical gleanings titled "Some Bumpus Families of Hebron, Maine." Geraldine Howe, of Bethel, has presented the Society with a collection of advertising pens from Bethel businesses as well as assorted programs of Bethel events circa 1900. An anonymous donor has donated a video, "Sins of Our Mothers," a PBS presentation dealing with a woman who marries her son in Fayette, Maine in the 19th century. This donor has also presented a copy of "Phillips Through My Eyes," by Winona R. Davenport. Joan Skillings Coolidge, Hanover, has presented the Society with a collection of Bethel Grand Army of Republic buttons and medallions. George K. Haines, of Bethel, has donated a photograph of the Emery house, which once stood behind the present Roberts Poultry Farm and a copy of the tax assessors' records for Bethel in 1884. Much appreciation is expressed for all these generous gifts to the collections of the Bethel Historical Society.

AWARD WINNERS AT THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE'S annual awards banquet display their awards. Mary Keniston received the Henry H. Hastings Citizenship Award (presented by Margaret Joy Tibbets); Jeff Parsons received the Business Award on behalf of Outward Bound (presented by Steve Wight); and Frances Clark received the Senior Citizen Award (presented by Norma Jodrey). The banquet was held Saturday night at Sunday River Ski Resort.

LITTLE WONDERS children's clothing store, on Main Street, Bethel, is now open. Owner Cindy Lu Burgess welcomes all parents in the area during regular business hours, Monday-Friday, 9-5, and Saturday, 10-4.

From the Bethel Area

Chamber of Commerce

The Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce held its 20th annual awards banquet last Saturday evening at White Cap Lodge, Sunday River Ski Resort.

A crowd of more than 100 businesspeople, community citizens and friends joined to enjoy a delicious dinner, the awards ceremony and dancing to the New Hampshire band "Radio Flyer."

The awards presentation, always the highlight of the evening, consisted of three awards this year. The Senior Citizen Award, presented by Norma Jodrey, was awarded to Frances Clark, an active Bethel woman who is moving to Ogunquit.

The Henry H. Hastings Award for citizenship was presented by Margaret Joy Tibbetts to a deserving Mary C. Keniston, of Bethel, for her many years of dedication to community activities.

The Business of the Year Award was presented by Steve Wight to Outward Bound. A lively Jeff Parsons was on hand to receive the award for the group.

It was an evening enjoyed by all.

Notes from the

Woodstock Historical Society

The Woodstock Historical Society currently plans to open its museum the last Saturday in May. From then on it should be open every Saturday, 1-4 p.m., throughout the summer. And, of course, meetings are held every second Saturday of the month, at 7 p.m. We covet your patronage at both or either.

In the area of exhibits, the most notable progress this past year has been in the addition of new materials for doing historical and genealogical research. The museum now has histories of most of the large towns surrounding Woodstock, such as Rumford, Bethel, South Paris, and Norway. This makes it possible for visitors to do research for the entire vicinity of Woodstock right at our museum building. The research of Ruby Emery is also well represented here. So do come and see what the resources of our archives are.

The Society also has many items on sale at the museum, including our own newly printed "Pictorial History of Woodstock." There is as yet no admission charge; but, as always, contributions are gratefully accepted.

Woodstock is fortunate in that it has had many distinguished citizens over the years. We have boasted a Maine governor, a bishop, a Civil War hero, a President's daughter, a distinguished musician, a portrait painter, a noted historian, and an army general, among others. Then there have been hundreds of average civic-minded individuals who have worked and sacrificed for the good of the community. Truly, Woodstock has been blessed in the calibre of its citizenry over the years.

Liane Chapman, owner of Flights of Fancy, Antiques and Collectibles, of Portland and Arundel, will speak about Antique Toys at the W.H.S. June program.

If any members have an old toy and wish to bring it to the meeting, Liane will be glad to give them some idea as to its value or answer any other questions about the toy that the member might have.

NEWS FROM

Adult Education

The Adult and Community Education office has learned that NOVA will again offer the Class I Truck Driving course this summer. Application forms are available at the Adult and Community Education office at Telstar. More detailed information is available from NOVA in Mexico, 364-3764.

Cathy Newell, director of adult and community education, attended the spring meetings for Maine's adult education directors, held in Freeport April 27-28. She also recently met with adult education directors, regional vocational directors, and officials from CMVTI as part of an ongoing dialogue about improving coordination between the VTIs in Maine and the regions they serve. The group has decided to formally organize and meet five times each year. Cal Chaplin, director of the Lake Region Vocational Center, will chair the group.

The SAD #44 Adult and Community Education program will offer a summer program starting in late June or early July, featuring GED preparation, remedial math for adults who need brush-up, two levels of computer courses and a selection of enrichment courses. The course brochure will be mailed out in early June. Any last-minute suggestions for courses are welcome at the office. Call 824-2780.

The adult Class of 1989 will be graduating on Tuesday, June 6, at the Bethel Inn Conference Center, with Gary Crocker of the Maine VTI system as speaker. The public is invited to attend and take part in this highlight of the adult education year. Caps and gowns will be worn for the first time by adult education graduates in SAD #44.

Adult guidance counselor Merrill Bittner recently attended a day of specialized training in the use of labor market information in career counseling, sponsored by the Maine Occupational Information Coordinating Committee in Brunswick. The Adult Guidance Resource Center at Telstar has an extensive selection of material on the subject, as well as catalogues from post-secondary institutions, materials on resume writing and other topics useful to adults seeking a career change. The Center is available during day and evening hours. Adults are also welcome to work on an individual basis with computer-assisted instruction in such subjects as reading, language and math, as well as typing. Migraine Headache Relief

Over 40 million Americans seek the advice and care of physicians each year for the relief of headaches. Migraine headaches are one of the most common headache types, occurring in about 15 percent of persons over 40 years of age. Migraine headache occurs when blood vessels in the head enlarge and press on nerves, causing headache pain. The pain is reported to be severe and throbbing or pulsating, typically occurring on one side of the head but sometimes spreading to the opposite side of the head.

Although stress is the major factor triggering migraines, headaches can result from exposure to bright lights or a stuffy room or the ingestion of foods such as chocolate, aged cheese, nuts, and citrus which contain the blood vessel dilator tyramine.

Mild migraine headaches may respond to nonprescription medicines such as aspirin or acetaminophen. More severe attacks may require ergotamine, which constricts blood vessels. Some medicines can also be used to prevent migraine headaches. Propranalol, one of the most effective medicines against migraines, prevents blood vessel dilation. Other medicines which prevent migraines include amitriptyline, clonidine, and methysergide.

THE ANDROSCOGGIN RIVER, near the Route 2 bridge in Bethel, rose steadily until late-Friday, putting fields under water.

THIS CONSTRUCTION SITE on the Sunday River Road turned into a pond as the waters of the Sunday River rose last Friday.

SANDING BROOK, in Bethel, turned Mason Street partially into a river, while flooding basements from Broad Street to Railroad Street. Developers who hope to put in a large-scale housing development behind the trees above, say they will clean out the brook and dig a retention pond to control the annual floods.

Agnes Gray School

By MARTA CLEMENTS

The week of May 7-13 was National Teacher Appreciation week, and we were made to feel appreciated. Many thanks to Michelle Blake, our parent volunteer coordinator, and to Eileen Mowatt for their efforts in organizing a very special surprise.

On May 9, Teacher Appreciation Day, a school wide assembly was held. No one breathed a word! Each teacher and teacher aide was presented with a unique clay apple, made in secret with the art teacher. The apple was on a base with something special written for each teacher and these were presented to each teacher by a student from his or her class. We will cherish them!

News from individual classes this week begins with Kindergarten. The children are learning the letter "W" by making the letter in sand trays. Only X, Y, Z to go!

The 1st-graders are working in math teams and are working hard on 10's and 1's. This is done by means of oral word problems to show recognition of groups of 10's and groups of 1's. There are four teams: Lindsey's Team, Nathan's Team, Becky's Team, and Bryan's Team. There is a winner in each round and there will be a grand winner at the end.

The 2nd-graders are also working on problem-solving in math, studying machines, inclined planes and pulleys, in science and are working on a booklet, writing about themselves for Mother's Day presents.

The 3rd-graders are combining art and science and are building bird houses. In language arts they are learning all about "y" changing to "ies".

The 4th-graders have set a date and hope to be going to Augusta on May 25. They will be visiting the State House, the Blaine House, and the Maine State Museum. They will be leaving from school at 9 a.m. and not returning until 4 p.m.

My 5th-graders have created answers and questions over their current social studies chapter and we are all set to play Jeopardy! This is harder than it sounds. We are used to answering questions, but not making up the questions to our answers. We are learning the poem, "The Walrus and the Carpenter," by Lewis Carroll. This is a joint effort this week. Everyone must learn one verse, but more can be learned if so desired.

Grades 5 and 6 are getting ready for scoliosis screening. Our school nurse, Mrs. Sheila Morse, will show a short film and hold a discussion of what this is all about. This will be followed up by an examination at a later date. Mrs. Morse will check the girls and our physical education teacher will check the boys. Parents will be notified if a further check by a family doctor is recommended.

The Chapter One reading teacher is sponsoring an end-of-the-year Scrumptious Sundae contest. Points will be earned with each book read and a celebration will be enjoyed by all the winners.

The Elementary Art Show will be held at the Guy E. Rowe School on Friday, May 19, 6-8 p.m. We are hoping for a good turnout.

WEST BETHEL

Children's Center

Do you suppose that Spring is really and finally here?

The theme of the week here has been "animals," and the children have been delighted over this topic. On Wednesday they were invited to visit Brenda Blaisdell's (just a mile out the Flat Road), where they found lop-eared rabbits and one bunny; two huge mother pigs with several smaller pigs; a frisky puppy; five ducks in the pond—along with one gorgeous goose. Brenda gave bread to each child to feed the fowls, and gave all a lot of time to enjoy the animals. Thanks, Bub.

On Friday, Fern Hickey is bringing in her baby kittens for all to see, from 7:30 to 8:30...and if the weather holds, staff and children will take a trip to teacher Tracy's barn to see baby chicks, goslings, turkeys, a 15-year-old pony named Dixie, and a couple of hamsters. Also three kittens and a mama cat, two little pigs, and four bunnies. Wow!

Outward Bound is expected to come to the Center on Friday to do a service project at the playground. Hopefully, some of the equipment that is in disrepair will be spruced up, fixed up, and made safe once more.

The adorable Star-of-the-Week is Casey Jean Gammon of East Bethel Road. She is almost five years old and has done a great job in telling the group about her family and favorite things.

The Golden Oldies High Ryder dance was a total success, and they have been booked to do another one or two in the fall and next spring. Many thanks to all who helped.

We do have immediate openings for the Day Care program and openings for the summer program. Please let us know of anyone needing these services. Thanks.

Visitors here on Monday were Mr. and Mrs. James Nike, of Gardiner.

Mrs. Mildred Dolph was at the doctor's, in Norway, Wednesday, for x-rays and a new cast put on her broken ankle.

Mrs. Christine Kimball, with Mrs. Mary Dooen and Mrs. Pam Rugg, attended the mother-daughter banquet and style show at the North Waterford Church, Thursday evening.

Flooding of rivers and streams and roads caused the cancellation of schools in this area Friday due to the heavy rains the last few days.

The memorial service at the Hunt's Corner Church will be held Sunday evening, May 21, at 7. Rev. Norman Rust minister.

Newry to honor vets of Korea and Vietnam wars

The rock in front of Newry's municipal building will soon have a plaque honoring the local veterans of the Korean and Vietnam conflicts. The selectmen decided yesterday (Tuesday) there was enough money in the war memorial fund to pay for the plaque.

The town will honor its war dead from all wars Sunday, May 28, at 10:30 a.m., in an early Memorial Day service, at the memorial rock.

In other town office news, Tax Collector Mary Tripp was expected to go to the county office in South Paris today (Wednesday) to place liens against two dozen properties that are delinquent in paying taxes. The liens will mature in 18 months, at which time the town will sell the properties to the highest bidder.

JEWISH SEMINAR IN AUGUSTA

On Sunday, May 21, Jews from all around the state of Maine will gather in Augusta, at Temple Beth El, for the first regional educational conference ever sponsored for the Jews of rural Maine.

Jews have a very long history in Maine, and small numbers of Jews live in practically every Maine community. However, the small number of Jews in rural communities makes it difficult to organize religious services, or arrange for Jewish education for children or for adults. Many of these Jews live in communities far from any rabbi or other professional Jewish educator.

The May 21 conference will provide an opportunity for rural Jews to get together and design practical and effective educational programming for these small Jewish communities that are without professional educators.

Guest teacher for the day will be Rabbi Harry Sky, of Portland, who has been a rabbi in Maine for almost 30 years. Rabbi Sky will speak about Jewish life cycle events, such as naming ceremonies for infants, Bar and Bat Mitzvah (ceremonies that mark emergence into adulthood), Jewish wedding and divorce ceremonies, and Jewish funeral ceremonies.

In addition to the instruction offered by Rabbi Sky, there will be an opportunity to discuss ways of providing continuing education for all of the small communities in Maine. Some of the programs that have already been put into effect in other rural areas include regular visits by "circuit riding" rabbis to smaller communities, and the establishment of a travelling video library, which will be made available to rural Jews no matter where they live.

This program is being sponsored by the Jewish Living and Learning Network (serving Jews in the north country from headquarters in Vermont), the United Synagogue of America, the Association of Conservative Congregations of North America, and Temple Beth El (the Jewish Synagogue in Augusta).

The program will begin at 9 a.m., at Temple Beth El, 22 Woodlawn St., Augusta, and will conclude by 4 p.m. A kosher lunch will be served.

For more information, call or write Rick Schwag, R.D. 2, Lyndonville, Vt. 05851 (802) 626-9928.

QUILT SHOW IN WINDHAM

The 12th Annual Quilt Show sponsored by the Pine Tree Quilters Guild of Maine will be held on Friday, July 28, Saturday July 29, and Sunday July 30 at the Windham Junior High School in Windham. Marge Bowen, this year's chairman, says she has "already received some exciting entries and the response has been wonderful."

Coinciding with the quilt show, Pine Tree is again offering a bonanza of quilt workshops. Quilter Janet Elwin will teach "Paper Free Hexagon Piecework" and a wonderful "Scrap 6-Pointed Star." Kathleen Weinheimer will guide you through the intricacies of working with color in her "Amish Color" workshop in addition to a class on "Wild Fabrics." For those interested in learning more about design, Paula Libby will teach "Simple By Design." Darlene Gauthier is teaching "Applique for Beginners and Beyond." "Making Your Own Feathered Designs" is offered by Dorothy Davis, "Terrific Trapunto" by Catherine Calef, and "Woven Basket with Broderie Perse" by Betty Sambor. These classes are for all levels of quilters. Some are half day classes and some are all day.

Pine Tree Quilters Guild is a non-profit organization with approximately 43 chapters spread throughout Maine. The local chapters often are involved in quilt related projects to keep their communities.

MUNDT-ALLEN POST NEWS

On May 9, Mundt-Allen American Legion and Auxiliary of Bethel held their annual installation of officers at the Legion Hall on Vernon Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bean and son Nathan were invited guests of the evening. Nathan gave a most interesting and informative report on his recent trip to the Freedom Foundation in Valley Forge, Pa. The Freedom Foundation is a Legion-sponsored program. Nathan is a senior at Telstar and last year as a junior was a delegate from Post #81 to Boys State.

Abbie Buswell, widow of Cmdr. Eugene Buswell, who died last December as a result of an automobile accident, was presented a Resolution of Respect and an American Legion clock in his memory.

Vito DeFillip, installing officer, was presented a check for $200 for the Chris DeFillip Memorial Scholarship Fund. The Post also designated an additional $300 scholarship to be known as the Eugene Buswell Memorial Scholarship. This brings the Post scholarships to five.

Carolyn Brooks conducted the Auxiliary installation, with Jeri Brooks acting as sgt-at-arms and Mike Coco as chaplain. Cmdr. Joe Taylor called a meeting of the Legion for Monday evening, May 15, at 7:30 p.m. for the purpose of finalizing Memorial Day events.

Alcohol cited in crashes

The Bureau of Safety reports that 13 people died in Maine traffic crashes in April.

The fact that five of the fatalities (38 percent) involved alcohol is a concern to Albert Godfrey, co-chairperson of the Maine Highway Safety Comission. "Summer is approaching and summer is when more recreational activities and events involve alcohol," said Mr. Godfrey. "If you're going to such an event, appoint a designated driver who will refrain from drinking."

The monthly report further explained that three of the victims were pedestrians, and one a motorcycle passenger who was not wearing a helmet. Of the nine who died in passenger vehicles, only two were using safety belts.

The 1989 fatality count through April stands at 64, one less than last year, but 12 above the five-year average of 52.

NOTES FROM

SAD #44 Guidance

Twelve members of the SAD #44 Guidance Advisory Committee met for their regular monthly meeting on May 1 at the Andover Elementary School. Recognition programs for school volunteers and student achievement were the main topics of discussion, followed by an update on the progress made by the recently formed Life Skills Committee.

Members brainstormed ideas for recognizing school volunteers at the Middle School at the request of Counselor Sally Hannon. Mrs. Hannon was pleased with the suggestions made and will incorporate many of these in the school's end-of-the-year ceremonies.

In discussing ways the schools were recognizing student achievements, members learned that a variety of methods were in place throughout the district. New this year at the Middle School will be special programs designed to acknowledge students for perfect attendance, bringing up grades, consecutive honor roll status and citizenship.

Members all agreed these efforts were important and needed. Though budget and time constraints were seen as problems to be overcome, members feel it is something that should be given major emphasis in the overall school program at each level. Committee members also expressed these views: 1) that students need to be recognized by their peers as well as adults, 2) that students want and need to receive positive feedback from teachers and that counselors should continue to encourage this, 3) that parents can benefit from hearing "good news" too from the schools, 4) that the payback in terms of raised self-esteem far exceeds the time and money necessary to implement these efforts, and 5) that low parent participation in middle school and high school functions was a real area of concern that needed to be addressed.

A letter from Nancy MacKillop, chairwoman of the Life Skills Committee, was read in her absence, updating Advisory members of the group's progress. Their seven member committee had reviewed Life Skills curriculum from other high schools, talked with school administrators and had prepared an outline for a possible new senior course offering. This outline is being submitted to Principal Theodore Davis. If approved, this proposed nine-week course will be offered as a second semester elective for seniors in the '89-'90 school year. This will give home economics instructors the opportunity to pilot the curriculum.

The proposed course outline includes the following topics: 1) decisions about the future, (i.e. jobs, living arrangements, necessities vs. luxuries); 2) nutrition (i.e. meal preparation, budget, setting tables, manners, small appliances); 3) care of clothing (i.e. sorting laundry, cost comparison of laundromat vs. home, basic sewing, stain removal); 4) health/C.P.R.; 5) finances (i.e. checking and savings accounts, establishing credit, income tax, payroll deductions, insurances, renting, scams, owning a car); 6) individual budgeting (i.e. food, clothing, shelter, trasportation, insurances, recreation). During the '89-'90 school year, the committee will further its goal to have this course included in the district's graduation requirements.

The next Guidance Advisory meeting will be a potluck supper, at 6 p.m., at the home of Melinda Remington, Bethel, on Wednesday, May 31. Members will reflect upon their year's work and discuss goals for another year.

"Bring friends closer to you during May is Better Hearing Month."

Eddie Albert wears two Beltone Petites.

It worked for me. Now I'm able to relax and enjoy conversation with friends on the telephone, at get-togethers and even in noisy restaurants. If you hear, but have difficulty understanding conversation, like I did, call Beltone today to schedule a free hearing evaluation. Your friends are worth it.

'Carousel' on stage this Saturday at Gould

"Carousel" will be performed on the Bingham Auditorium stage on Saturday, May 20, at 8 p.m. The Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, which debuted on Broadway in 1945, features such favorite old songs as "If I Loved You," "June is Busting Out All Over," "This Was a Real Nice Clambake," and "You'll Never Walk Alone." The setting for the musical is the coast of Maine.

The cast includes students and adults, from Crescent Park School, Telstar Regional High School, Gould Academy and the local community. Leading roles are played by Brenna Simpson, Paul Lothridge, Heidi Dixon, Will Stuart, Todd Posey, Catherine Ferris, Becky Hanscom and Kevin Davis. Choreography is by Barbara Gasser, costume design by Vicki Rickliffe, with props created and gathered by Nancy Grover. The production is under the direction of Carol Fiske and will be accompanied on the piano by Roberta Muse.

This is the first community musical to be staged in Bethel since "Plain and Fancy," in 1979. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

Elderwood Manor Items

by Florence Hall

Dorothy Elliott is visiting with a cousin, Phyllis Chandler, in Lovell for a few days.

Mary Thurston called on friends at the Manor recently.

Sunday callers at Catherine McGuire's were her sister, Dora Morton, and sister Laura Staples and son, of Portland.

Congratulations to Florence and Albert Howes. They celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Sunday.

Florence Hall has violets budded outside under her kitchen window.

Anne Fox and Florence Hall attended a Historical Society meeting with a group at Beverly Swan's on Wednesday.

Thought of the day: Great art can't hold a candle to a Kindergarten picture painted with love.

Calvary Congregational Church

Rev. Donald Grover's message: "The Blessing of the Lord." Zephaniah, 3:10-20.

The choir sang: "Only believe."

Missionary moments: A letter was read by the pastor on the plight and poverty of a forgetten people in Brazil. Christ is the answer, can we help as his church in some way?

Closing hymn: "The longer I serve him."

May 21, Baccalaureate service, Hobbs Pond, trio and a delicious dinner, everyone welcome.
